

BUFFALOBUR

Buffalobur is a troublesome
weed, not a noxious weed!

Buffalobur is not a highly competitive weed, but is common to grow in rows of crops such as soybeans as well as feedlots and abused pastures. Stems are armed with yellow spines matching the yellow flower lobes. Overgrazing pastures is a main contributor to the growth of this weed.